

Which Week?

This Week: Monday 29th April (Week 2)

Next Week: TUESDAY 7th April (Week 1)

Sixth Sense

Just a reminder to all parents and carers that next Monday (6th May) is the Early May Bank Holiday. As such, no student will be required to attend, and will return as normal for 8.30am on Tuesday 7th May. We wish you all the best for the extended weekend when it arrives.

“A Journey of a thousand miles...”

...Absolutely starts with a single step. Following on from our talk by Gareth from the University of Lincoln and then modelling to you the university search tool on Unifrog during last week’s assembly, why not take that ‘single step’ and have a look at what courses are out there and link with your own interests and aspirations, places where you would be happy to study (home or away?) and are in line with the grade you are working at or believe you can achieve.

Link: <https://www.unifrog.org/sign-in> (if you have forgotten your password, a new one can be requested via this same page that will then be send to your academy email account (which is your username for Unifrog too!).

Laptops do NOT have legs.

PLEASE return them to the cabinet (or to my office if there is a problem with putting it away).

Places are going fast, if you are interested, please return your deposit or speak to Mrs Ridley Anxiety-Beating Podcast Recommendations of the Week!

With the stage of the year that we are at, a little ‘light relief’ can often be a valuable asset, and therefore this week’s recommendations are for two anxiety-beating podcast, by virtue of humour! The first recommendation is the Comedy of the Week podcast by the BBC, a veritable carousel of different comedy radio programmes that changes weekly. Were to like the comedy on offer, a series of the other programmes will then be available to go to and similarly enjoy. This week’s episode is by the comedian, Milton Jones, via his “Thanks a Lot, Milton Jones” programme/podcast. I defy you to listen to this and not laugh at the simplicity/silliness of the humour!

Link to Comedy of the week webpage: <https://www.bbc.co.uk/sounds/play/p0hrwqww2>

The second recommendation is the Off Menu podcast, presented by comedians Ed Gamble and James Acaster who then invite special guests into their magical (make-believe) restaurant to each choose their favourite starter, main course, side dish, dessert and drink whilst linking each course to their own anecdotes and adding several tablespoons full of humour. Very listenable and almost 250 episodes to choose from that range from Hollywood actors like Paul Rudd and Stranger Things actor, Finn Wolfhard to a full range of British guests from Lily Allen to Sir Lenny Henry. Water Safety

Spending time by water is a great way to hang out with friends, but it's crucial you know how to keep yourself and your friends safe.

In 2022, 60% of the 226 accidental drownings in the UK occurred in locations such as canals, lakes, ponds and streams.

The National Water Safety Forum says:

- If you get into trouble in the water, float to live.
- Lean back and use your arms and legs to help you float, then get control of your breathing before calling for help or swimming to safety.
- If you see someone else in trouble in the water, call 999 or 112. If you are at the coast ask for the coastguard. If you are inland, ask for the fire service.

It's never too late to learn to swim and it could literally save your life. If you are not a confident swimmer visit www.swimming.org/learntoswim/ to search for local lessons.

NEXT TIME...

Grooming and transitioning to university or college.

Internet Safety Reminder

- Remember to set privacy settings on social media sites so that only close friends can search for you and tag you.
- Only say online what you would be comfortable saying face to face, have respect for yourself and others.
- Future employers may search for you online, you may forget about "those" images and "that" post in the future. Think about leaving a positive digital footprint.
- Don't give in to peer pressure by sending inappropriate comments or images for more information on how to deal with sexting and flirting situations visit tinyurl.com/3ekmujmc

If you are experiencing cyberbullying, talk about it with a trusted adult, keep the evidence, block the bully online and visit www.internetmatters.org for advice on how to deal with it.

Safety in the Evenings

As the weather warms up you may be spending more time outside in the evenings with your friends.

Don't forget to keep yourself and your friends safe.

Quick Sunscreen Tips.

UVA radiation can penetrate glass. This can be a car window, or even your windows at home. Did you know computer screens emit UVA or B light which causes skin damage?

Current advice is for everyone to wear sunscreen everyday.

Be sure to protect your skin. Layer correctly: moisturise first, then apply sunscreen followed by make-up if you choose.

EXAM SEASON

Now that the summer term has started, some of you are getting closer to sitting your G.C.S.E.'s or A' Level exams. We know you have spent lots of time in school and probably at home, preparing for these exams and it can be a stressful time for you. With this in mind we would like to share some of the signs of exam worries with you and some of the ways you can help manage these.

Signs of exam stress/anxiety

You may exhibit physical, behavioural, and emotional symptoms, which can indicate you are worried about your exams. These could be:

- Excessive worrying.
- Disturbed sleep.
- Suffering headaches and/or stomach pains.
- Feeling moody/irritable.
- Loss of interest in your food or eating more than normal.
- Lacking enjoyment in activities you usually enjoy.

Note: you may display more than one of these symptoms.

How can you manage your stress?

We are all different so the way we manage our stress will be unique to us, but some of the ways listed below have been known to help:

- Have regular conversations with your peers, teachers or adults at home about any worries you may have.
- Seek extra support with your revision.
- Eat a balanced diet.
- Make sure you are getting enough sleep.
- Take time out to do activities you enjoy.
- Take part in regular exercise.

Some of you may start to feel better when the exams are over, if you don't and are still feeling anxious or suffering with low mood, see your GP.

Upcoming Awareness Days

April - National Stress Awareness Month

April is National Stress Awareness Month. This year's theme is "Little By Little, A Little Becomes A Lot." The idea that small consistent actions each day contribute to overall well-being as a cumulative effect.

The campaign aims to spread awareness about signs of stress and how to manage them. Stress can affect everyone differently and can be brought on by different situations in life, such as exams, moving home, arguments with friends, changing schools/jobs, or the loss of a loved one.

We can't always prevent stress, but we can learn ways to manage it, such as eating a balanced diet, getting quality sleep, exercising, and communicating with others. You could try a daily wellness challenge, journaling, saying positive self-affirmations daily, recognizing small wins and successes. Little by little, you can significantly increase your well-being.

Stress can affect you both emotionally and physically, and it can affect the way you behave. For some fantastic free activities, challenges, journals, planners and more visit tinyurl.com/5y8dkh4z

13th May - Mental Health Awareness Week

This year's Mental Health Awareness week theme is "Movement: Moving more for our mental health." Being active is important for our mental health. But so many of us struggle to get enough exercise. Can you find moments for movement in your daily routines?

Take a look at the website below for more information and guidance about what type and how much exercise is right for you.
